The power of the Swiss stone pine

The Swiss stone pine (pinus cembra), also known as "queen of the Alps", is a species of pine tree and grows above the altitude of 1,400 m and below 2,400 m. The positive characteristics of these trees on the holistic well-being of people has been known for centuries.

Improved sleep

Studies confirm that the scent of the wood slows down the heart rate through essential oils. This improves recovery times intensively and supports blood circulation.

General well-being

The Swiss stone pine allows for deep relaxation and inner peace, you will feel wonderfully rested.

No more moths

Swiss stone pine contains pinosylvins which stop fungus and bacteria from attacking the wood. If the swiss stone pine is used in furniture its scent keeps moths away. A cupboard out of swiss stone pine offers a moth-free storage for your cloths.

The scent of the swiss stone pine in the Berghotel

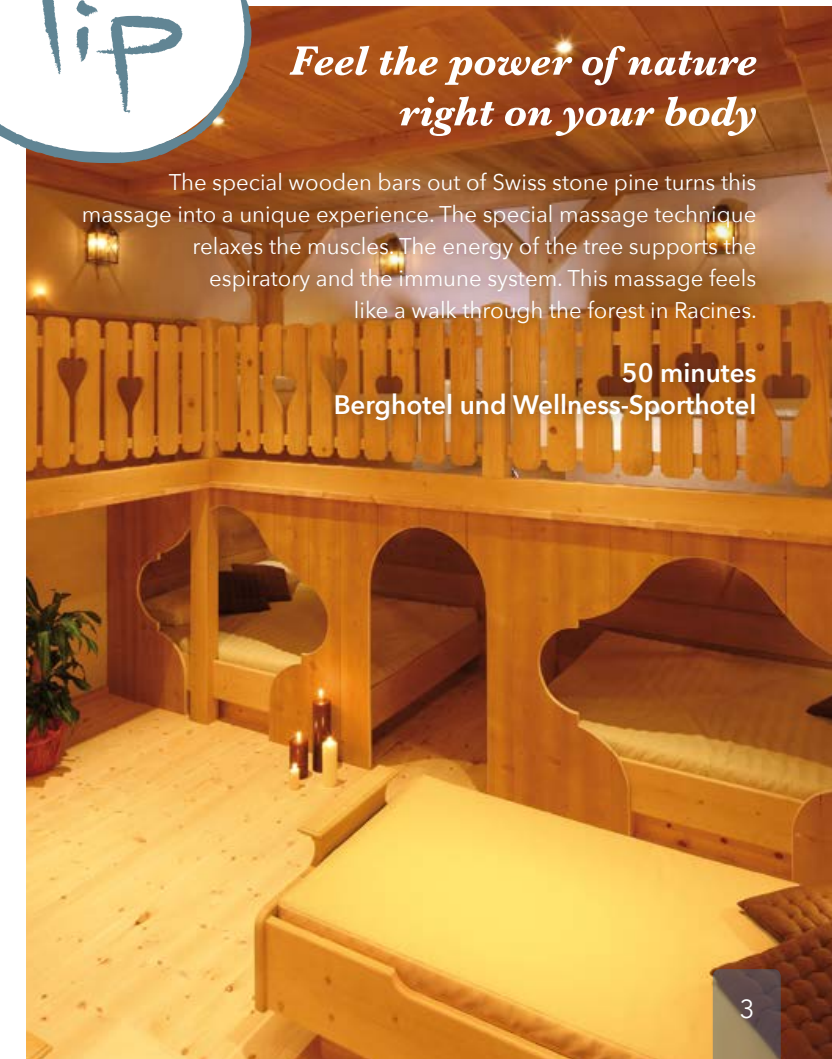

Our relaxation room "Calm pine cottage" awaits you with wonderful warmth and absolute relaxation. The atmosphere in the room is truly special. Feel as if you were in a mountain cottage. Body and soul will calm down thanks to the amazing scent of the pines. Indulge yourself and feel the magic of our sauna area.

Feel the power of nature right on your body

The special wooden bars out of Swiss stone pine turns this massage into a unique experience. The special massage technique relaxes the muscles. The energy of the tree supports the espiratory and the immune system. This massage feels like a walk through the forest in Racines.

Winter cottages in Sterzing and Ratschings

Snow-shoe-hiking, tobogganing or winter hiking are wonderful - especially with a stop in one of the winter cottages which offers typical, delicious South Tyrolean specialties. Many cottages and huts are opened during winter - even outside of the skiing area - a wonderful trip in nature!

We inform you happily about the tours to these lovely cottages. What are you waiting for?

Tip

‘Kaiserschmarrn’ - A very special South Tyrolean sweet

150 g flour
100 ml milk
100 ml cream
6 egg yolks
half a package of vanilla sugar 1 spoon rum
6 egg-whites
a dash of salt 40 g sugar
40 g raisins (optional)
Additional: baking oil, powdered sugar to sprinkle

Preparation: Mix flour, milk, cream, the egg yolks, vanilla sugar and the rum to a smooth batter. Beat the egg whites, the salt and the sugar and add them to the batter. Heat the oil in a big pan and pour the batter into it. Add the raisins if you want to. Once one side is baked golden, turn the whole thing around. Bake the batter afterwards in the preheated oven (200°C) for 3-5 minutes. Then you can rip the ‘Kaiserschmarrn’ into pieces with two works.
Enjoy it with powdered sugar.

5 reasons why fresh mountain air is great for us

Tip

Lots of oxygen

Exercise outside allows us to breathe deeply, which supplies all organs, muscles and especially the brain with oxygen. More oxygen improves concentration and focus.

Bad mood? Let's explore nature!

Exercise outside and regular time spent in nature, even in bad weather, is great for your body and your well-being. These times outside are also highly beneficial to your soul. The exercise recharges your batteries and boosts your happiness.

Full of energy your entire life

The mountain air is really healthy because it allows for deep breathing combined with true calmness and relaxation. A Greek study concluded that life-expectancy rises with higher altitude levels.

Protection from illness

The fresh mountain air is great for your blood circulation, your immune system and protects you from heart attacks. The thin and dry air in connection with more sun activates the body's defenses.

Great ideas

Fresh air makes you smarter! Apparently, it is not the air alone which supports your concentration but a bacterium (mycobacteria vaccae) to be found in nature. It stimulates special brain cells and increases serotonin levels in your body. And we all know that serotonin makes us happy!
